

SPSEA Teacher Panel

October 17, 2016

1. Start off with each introducing themselves and what school they currently work in and their role. A little backstory of how they got to where they are today.
2. What advice would you give for us as future teachers while we are still in college? What should we be doing now? What should we keep our eyes out for? What can we do now that will make us the best professionals later?
3. A big discussion in our education department and in education as a whole is special education and inclusion. What is your experiences with positive inclusion and negative inclusion? Based on those experiences, what is your advice for us as a mix of degrees- having special education in our degree and not?
4. I think something that is on many of our minds right now is the current election. Besides our student teachers on the panel, all of you have experienced changes in the government. I know many of us are thinking what we're learning right now in our classes is based on common core and based on the presidential candidates talk, education may change in the future. What should our mindset be while still in school? What are some experiences you all have had in the changes in government in your career so far and what advice might you have?
5. What would you say the most challenging aspects of education are?
6. How do you pick the right school district for you?
